Catalogue of Anonymous Reporting Lines at Other Universities

Minnesota (see http://www1.umn.edu/audit/AuditHotline.htm) has had one up and running for a year.

Michigan State is launching its hotline soon (see http://www.msu.edu/unit/intaudit/hotline.html).

Texas has one up and running (see http://www.utexas.edu/admin/audit/fraud.html)

University of Virginia (see http://www.virginia.edu/audit/).

The University of Colorado's fraud web site directs people who wish to report anonymously to use the State of Colorado's fraud hotline. See http://www.cu.edu/audit/fraud.html.

The University of Tennessee System's fraud web site directs people who wish to report anonymously to use the State of Tennessee's fraud hotline (see http://audit.tennessee.edu/fraud.htm).

University of Tennessee at Chattanooga has its own fraud hotline (see http://www.utc.edu/Administration/InternalAudit/).

The University of California System launched an ethics hotline on all 10 UC campuses. See http://www.tnwinc.com/news/pressreleases/TNW_PR_070705UCA.asp. They contracted with The Network, Inc. As an example of one of the institutional websites, see the one for the University of California at San Diego (http://blink.ucsd.edu/Blink/External/Topics/Policy/0,1162,2363,00.html).

Several of the private universities have these as well.

Yale http://www.yale.edu/resources/

Northwestern contracted with EthicsPoint (see http://www.northwestern.edu/ethics/).

The University of Rochester calls its hotline the "university integrity hotline." See http://www.rochester.edu/adminfinance/audit/FraudInTheWorkplace-APreventionGuide.pdf.

Case Western Reserve (see http://www.case.edu/president/audit/hotline.htm).

Auburn University's audit web site includes "five reasons Auburn University implemented an anonymous reporting hotline (see http://www.auburn.edu/administration/internal_auditing/fromthedesk.html).